To: Most Honorable Members of the Cultural Property Advisory Committee, I've been a life-long student & collector of ancient Roman coins & strongly oppose extending restrictions to Roman Imperial coins, as proposed in the latest MOU. This action is unfair & unjust. The bulk of Roman Imperial coins were struck at provincial mints outside of the boundaries of modern Italy. These coins are important cultural property that belong to the entire world, not just the country of Italy. I'm an active member & supporter of the internet website Coin Talk, that has a large following of ancient coin collectors that share their knowledge & experiences about Roman coins. This website has many young collectors & beginning collectors of modest means that have a thirst for knowledge & collect Roman coins for their historical & artistic value. Adding more restrictions to common coins that were struck in quantities of many millions & have little intrinsic value seems pointless. Please evaluate this latest MOU from all sides & ask yourselves, do we really need more restrictions?
